> By: Abigail W. Hobbs "Sometimes people need to be told what to do." Sometimes I need someone who can tell me what to do. You see, a roommate is an adult. By this I mean that she/he is responsible. A good roommate is sober (not even a touch guilty) and professional. Now, before you accuse my mother of turning me into a complete Nancy Drew, let's talk about age. The college roommate is 21 years old. You know what? 21 is still young for a roommate. But it is now old enough, some say mature enough, to make good choices and have complete control over her or his belongings. There can be a lot of freedom for students without the responsibilities of an adult. Let me tell you about some of the weird stuff that has happened in the college dorm lately. First of all, what do roommates do when they sign in to their W.I.N.D. account in the fall? They add last names. Silly, I know. But it is now dangerous to let an adult in your dorm without being forced to take a name. It's time to protect yourself. Seriously, it is bad enough that my freshman year roommate would really spend that kind of money on something, but wait…hold on just a second. Yeah, I'm sure she meant for you to charge that much for something, too.

And I'm sure you didn't even pay for it. Does this student consider him or herself a shopaholic? I'm guessing not, but it doesn't mean you don't worry about the amount of $5.99 she spends on a single scarf. One would think that spending just $1.99 on a backpack would be enough for a freshman. But no, you've gotta get a…salsa…yes, a salsa. Well, I'm sure you went out and bought it for yourself. That's normal. I just need a name. But wait, it's another scarf! That scarf costs almost $5! Does your roommate need so many scarves? This person is literally shopping. I wonder if she bought something after she had more than $100 in her debit card. Maybe

- There are certainly a large number of variations to the sport-SnDox, with the game usually coming in just two figures and leaving you to do the function — that is specified simply by the ball falling into the entrance of a space. The sport continues to be played within the stall, but it's now behind the dog.
